Mohammed S. ElSheemy is currently an Associate Professor of Urology at Cairo University, Egypt. After obtaining his medical degree from Cairo University in 1999, Dr. Mohammed ElSheemy earned a Master of Science then Doctor of Medicine in Urology in 2008. His research includes endourology and urolithiasis, SWL, pediatric urology, pediatric renal transplantation, female urology, pelvic floor dysfunctions and urodynamics. Based on Dr. ElSheemy research, a surgeon tailored ordinary polypropylene mesh was inserted as a mid-urethral tape for treatment of SUI using his own-designed (with his team) helical passers with marked decrease in the cost of treatment. Additionally, an important part of his research was on calculi anuria in children and infants which resulted; for the 1st time, in a protocol for management depending on severity of obstruction, size and site of stones, and renal functions. Furthermore, he has several publications on Mini-PNL in adults and children. His publications on the use of Mini-PNL for the management stones in patients with renal congenital anomalies or the use of single-stage bilateral Mini-PNL for bilateral renal stones may be the first studies in this field. He has published several scientific papers and book chapters and serve as an editor and reviewer in several international peer-reviewed scientific journals. These research activities was supported by several courses in scientific writing and advanced statistical analysis.

He was selected as one of the top 10% of reviewers in the field of medicine for 2016 in the peer review week (2016) through (Sentinels of Science awards) that is provided by (Publons) which is an international web site concerned with peer review activities (with its verification) for international scientific journals. Then, he was selected as one of the top 1% of reviewers in the next 2 years (2017) and (2018). Additionally, his researches were selected as the best poster/abstract in many international conferences including EGPU and EAU. Dr. ElSheemy is a member of several societies in Urology including European Association of Urology (EAU), European Society for Pediatric Urology (ESPU) and Societe internationale Urologie (SIU). He has served as Assistant-Secretary of Pediatric Urology Section of Egyptian Urological Association (EUA). Being a reviewer for Urology Journal is an honor, as you are allowed to contribute to the scientific level of this journal. Careful and fair-minded evaluation of scientific articles is an important scholarly contribution and a gratifying duty in academics.
