Best Reviewer of the January-February 2022 issue - Aykut Aykaç

Aykut Aykaç

Aykut Aykaç performed his urology residency from Ankara Dışkapı Yıldırım Beyazıt Training and Research Hospital, Turkey. Between 2016-2020, he worked as a faculty member at the Karabuk University, Faculty of Medicine, Department of Urology. He became an associate professor of urology at Eskişehir City Hospital in 2021. He has various publications in the field of endourology, particularly in the treatment of stone diseases.

I am aware that it is difficult to conduct scientific research. I see criticism as finalizing the prepared articles, such as a chef putting the final touch on a dish. As someone who looks at work from the outside, I have the opportunity to evaluate it more objectively. My main advantage according to the reader is that I have the chance to learn about the things I wonder about in the study. I would like to thank the editors of the journal who were deemed worthy of the Best Reviewer award, which honored me very much.
